QUOTATION

"Because half a dozen grasshoppers under the fern make the field ring with their importunate clink, while thousands of great cattle reposed in the shadow of the British oak, chew the cud and are silent, pray do not imagine that those who make the most noise are the only inhabitants of the field."

—Edmund Burke

OUR REAL COAL PROBLEM

North of Washington, D. C., and east of Pittsburgh, anthracite is the coal most exclusively used in the households. In other sections of the United States more bituminous than anthracite is used. In New England about 75 per cent of the people use anthracite coal for heating their homes and for cooking. It is only a few years since coal for household use could be purchased for less than half the present prices and we Yankees are accustomed to place the blame for this almost entirely upon profiteers, some big, some little. In the main we are right about it. Profiteering begins before the miner raises his pick. The Girard Estate and other great interests own a very large part of the anthracite coal fields. These people lease the right to mine coal at a stated price per ton. Eight years ago this royalty was 33 cents a ton. Today it is $1.10 a ton. This is graft. They have the power to extract more and, unfortunately, we must yield to their demands whatever they may be. Next we come to the great companies, commonly spoken of as the railroad coal companies. There are eight of these and they put on the market 75 per cent of the coal used in the northeastern part of the United States. This combination is so well organized and so strong that it dominates the price of coal from the mine to the consumer and greed stands as toll gatherer all along the way. The retail dealer is a saint, compared to the big fellows between them and the mine. He knows he has to pay more than a fair price for his coal, even better than we do, but, like us, he is forced to come to terms. Even if graft were made impossible, trade combinations dissolved and fair dealing established from the owners of the anthracite coal areas to the furnaces in our cellars and the ranges in our kitchens, our domestic coal problem of the future would not be solved.

Those of us who are looking forward to old time coal prices will be disappointed. We who live in New England have been so accustomed to the use of anthracite that few of us realize how uncommon a fuel it is. The time is not far distant when it will be a luxury fuel, too expensive for use in the home of the citizen of moderate means. The reasons for this are statistical and positive. The world's supply of anthracite is far below the world's needs. In the United States a small amount of this coal is mined in Virginia, Arkansas and Colorado, but from a national point of view anthracite coal means Pennsylvania anthracite.

The coal area of Pennsylvania is about two-thirds the size of Waldo county. Mining is carried on wherever the thickness of the coal vein is sufficient to make mining profitable. The annual output is about 90,000,000 tons. The coal experts of the U.S. Geological Survey have stated that the maximum yearly production has been reached and that at this rate the available coal will have been brought to the surface in about 100 years. We cannot look to foreign countries for a supply of anthracite because the combined output of all of them is only one-tenth that of the State of Pennsylvania. With the above facts before us it is evident that we can forecast with reasonable accuracy when anthracite cannot be obtained at any price.

It is fortunate for the people of the United States that we have deposits of bituminous and lower grades of coal to the amount of 3,500,000,000 tons, and these coals are found in abundance in more than half our States. Although Europe, Asia, Africa and South America have plenty of these coals, in amount our country has a larger supply than any other land on the globe. So abundant are these coals that no combination of capital can ever acquire a monopoly of ownership and nullify the law of supply and demand.

The great coal problem of today is to turn bituminous coal into a slow-burning and smokeless fuel, to take the place of anthracite at a reasonable cost. Some of our leading combustion engineers are already devoting their energies to the solution of this problem.

The Secretary of the Navy has abandoned the air station at Cape May. This station is one of the largest on the Atlantic coast and closing it will result in a very substantial saving. The Secretary of War has sold the cantonment at Camp Taylor, Kentucky, for over $700,000. There are still a good many leaks in the Ship of State which ought to be stopped, but she is not so completely waterlogged as she was a few months ago.

In July of this year we exported 12 per cent more pounds of wheat and flour than we did in July of last year, but the price received totalled 48 per cent less. We increased the amount of cotton exported 150 per cent, but the value decreased 28 per cent. The increase of meat and dairy products exported was 50 per cent, but there was a decrease of 3 per cent in value. Prices would have been much lower on the above necessities here at home if it were not for the great foreign demand for them.

Telephone Topics has a little four liner entitled "The Best Firm" and giving the following list: "Watch and Wait"; "Attitude, Early & Late"; "Vo & Daire"; and "Grinn & Barrett."

We see nothing in the list that has anything on a firm name that formerly adorned a sign on Water street, Augusta.—"Young & Smart."

About forty years ago there was to be seen a business sign in Aroostook county which informed the public that the firm name was "Sharp & Ketchum."

The ZR-2 cost $2,000,000 and a hangar was built in New Jersey in which to house it if it succeeded in crossing the Atlantic. This hangar cost as much as did the airship. $4,000,000 is too much money to pay for a national toy. The interest on this sum is $200,000 a year. Even if this blimp had reached our shores in safety we had no practical use for it. The money spent on this thing would have been wasted.

TOOK IT EASY

A few days ago on the train from Bangor a one-legged man got on at Augusta, and as soon as the conductor was out of sight went the length of the car leaving little cards which contained the information that he had lost one leg in an accident, he had a wife and two small children to support and that any assistance would be appreciated.

When he collected the cards he gathered quite a few dimes from the passengers. Then he settled down to a seat, motioned for the train boy, bought a couple of expensive magazines and proceeded to entertain himself.—Portland Press.

THOUSANDS OF RED CROSS WORKERS TO MEET IN OCTOBER

First National Convention to Be Held in Columbus, Ohio; Pageant a Feature

The American Red Cross will this year, for the first time in its history, hold a national convention which is expected to bring together several thousand representatives of the organization in all parts of the United States. The convention will be held at the Ohio State Exposition Grounds, Columbus, Ohio, from October 4th through October 7th, preceding by a month the fifth annual Roll Call for members, which will take place from Armistice Day, November 11th, to Thanksgiving Day, November 24th.

The outstanding features of the program will be a series of great mass meetings in the coliseum of the exposition grounds with addresses by national leaders of thought and action and national officers of the American Red Cross; an historical pageant tracing the progress of mercy and service up through the centuries, in which more than 2000 men, women and children will take part; a pageant picturing the service of the Junior Red Cross; singing by a chorus of a thousand voices; a reunion of Red Cross nurses who served overseas during the World War; a mass conference on the Red Cross Roll Call, and a series of important sectional conferences on the various phases of the Red Cross peace program.

Noted Speakers Invited. Among those who have been invited to address the delegates are: President Harding, now President of the American Red Cross; William Howard Taft, Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court; John W. Weeks, Secretary of War; Edwin Denby, Secretary of the Navy; Herbert Hoover, Secretary of Commerce; General John J. Pershing; Charles R. Forbes, Director of the new Veterans' Bureau; John G. Emery, Commander of the American Legion; William Jennings Bryan; Judge Masaryk, of the Czechoslovakian Red Cross; R. B. Bennett, of the Canadian Red Cross; Miss Alice Fitzgerald, of the League of Red Cross Societies; Fighting Chaplain Duffy.

Red Cross leaders who are scheduled to speak include Dr. Livingston Farrand, Chairman of the Central Committee; W. Frank Parsons, Vice-Chairman in charge of domestic operations; Albert Ross Hill, Vice-Chairman in charge of foreign operations; Eliot Wadsworth, Mrs. August Belmont, Miss Mabel T. Boardman and Dr. Thomas W. Green.

If the duties of his office permit him to attend President Harding will probably speak at the opening mass meeting on the evening of October 4th, "The Response for the Nation," following Dr. Farrand's address on "The Call."

A Magnificent Spectacle. The pageant, "The Red Cross of Service," will, it is believed, be one of the most magnificent spectacles of pageantry presented in this country. It will be produced under the direction of the author, Ruth Mougey Worrell, and among those taking part will be some 50 men and women who were distinction during the war for service to the Government and the Red Cross. A program of special music is being arranged and the big chorus will assist. Professor Lamson Warner, of New York City, is in charge of the stage sets, which will provide an all legorical background. The costumes are being made by volunteer workers of the Columbus Chapter from designs by Ray Sohey and under his direction. Many innovations in lighting and technical effects are being worked out.

The purpose of the pageant is to impress on the delegates from all sections of the country the importance to communities and to the entire country of the permanent program of the Red Cross. It will trace through the centuries, from the beginning of the present era, the spirit of service which is now symbolized by the cross of red on the field of white. While the main portion of the pageant depicts in a dramatic and inspiring way the different services of the Red Cross during the war and today, in peace, it will be preceded by a spectacular historical procession, passing by Human-ity, accompanied by Mercy, Faith, Service, Hope and Love, the groups in the procession illustrating great events in various centuries of charity and service. One of the most pretentious scenes will be that of King Arthur and the Knights of the Round Table, and the knight of Sir Galahad for Service.

While the mass meetings and the pageant will attract a great deal of attention and will give splendid inspiration to those in attendance, the sectional conferences will be the real meat of the convention, the working sessions. At these conferences active Red Cross workers from communities in many States, representing various points of view, will discuss the important problems met by Chapters and Branches in carrying out their peace programs, including disaster relief, public health nursing, the general health program, volunteer service, Junior Red Cross work, post-war activities, instruction in home hygiene and care of the sick nutrition, and the like.

New England Delegates. Arthur G. Rotch, Manager of the New England Division of the American Red Cross, has informed every Chapter in this Division's territory of the Convention, and has urged that delegates be selected as soon as possible. It is hoped that each of the 137 Chapters will send at least one delegate to Columbus, and wherever possible a group of delegates. The New England Division was a leader in war work, and it should maintain its prestige by sending a big delegation to represent it at the first national mobilization of Red Cross working forces.

DO NOT FORGET THIS

There is but one way to maintain our wages; our standard of living; our conditions of labor. That one way is to throw a protecting wall about these industrial blessings which are our hard-won rights and the wall can only be that of an adequate Protective Tariff. High enough to equalize the differences between American and foreign wages and living standards; low enough to keep alive a healthy competition, but always high enough to preserve for us, and never low enough to give to foreigners, our wonderfully rich and self-gratifying home market of the great United States.—Boston Wage Earner, 7,221.

MORRILL.

Roy Paul has moved to Belfast, living on Congress street.

Leona Woodbury begins high school at Franklin this week.

Daniel E. Higgins of Washington, D. C., is at home for two weeks' vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. Austin Abbott and sons of Brewer were week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. Delbert Paul.

The primary department of the village school is taught by Miss Young of Linville. She boards with Mrs. Lilla Pearson. High school begins next week, Mrs. Wilbur Brown teacher.

The social event of last week was the wedding at the church of Miss Eva Wentworth of Waldo to Victor Merriam of Lowell. Although living in an adjoining town, she belonged to this church, always attending Sunday school and church services here when at home. Her many friends in town wish the happy couple a long life, made up year by year with 12 calendar months, each month with its respective moon and each moon a honeymoon.

North Waldo Baptist quarterly meeting was held at the church last Saturday and Sunday. Beautiful weather, good attendance and fine speakers. Rev. R. C. Thomas, a missionary from the Philippines, was present and gave three fine addresses upon that country and his work there as doctor, evangelist and instructor among the Philippines. Mrs. Nellie Thompson Morgan also gave an eloquent address upon missionary work. Rev. Arthur Griffiths of Camden gave an able sermon. Evangelist E. C. Davis of Lewiston and Rev. F. S. Dolliff of Jackson were also present and very helpful spiritual meetings were the results.

The ladies of the Baptist church held their annual calendar opening at the vestry Wednesday afternoon, Aug. 31. Forty ladies and five or six men were present. Called to order by the president, Mrs. Nathan Hunt. Bible reading by Rev. Nathan Hunt, repeating 23rd Psalm by all. Prayer by Rev. Fred Morgan, field secretary for Zion's Herald. Then came a short program of readings and song. Arthur Gillingham of Portland, connected with the Y. M. C. A. work there, was called upon and gave a very interesting account of the work and its good results. Mrs. Nellie Thompson Morgan, president of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of New England, gave a very interesting account of missions, missionaries, and the great need of workers and money. Rev. Fred Morgan, a former missionary, gave the amen, as he said, to his wife's remarks, and a very pleasing, conclusive amen it was. Appropriate remarks by the pastor and the president. Then the business meeting, report of the secretary, Mrs. Lilla Pearson, and report of the months. 20 months collected through their weeks $138. The president and secretary were re-elected. 20 sisters volunteered as months for the next year. Meeting adjourned followed by a season of sociability and enjoyment of ice cream and cake.

Waldo County Veterans

Waldo County Veterans' Association were the guests of Silver Harvest Grange, Waldo, Thursday, Sept. 1st. The day was perfect and the visitors began to arrive early by autos and teams, and when the noon hour arrived some 200 were present to partake of the good things provided by the sisters of the grange. Promptly at 10.30 the meeting was called to order by the president, J. G. Trask, and the records of the last meeting were read and accepted. An invitation from Granite Grange, North Searsport, to hold the October meeting with them was accepted. Comrade Morse was called upon to entertain us for five minutes; also Comrade Abbott of Liberty.

Adjourned for dinner.

The afternoon session was opened at 1.30 p. m. with singing by the audience. Prayer by Comrade Abbott. Forty-two veterans responded to the roll call. Twenty-three wives and widows of veterans were present. One comrade reported as having answered the last roll call since our last meeting—Leander Sargent, 26th Maine, Co. K, Searsport.

The following splendid program was then carried out: Address of welcome was by Ada Sanborn, who very prettily welcomed the veterans, members and guests. Response by Comrade Morse of Liberty in his pleasing manner. Patriotic drill by 8 young ladies with hoops of red, white and blue. Many of the old war songs were rendered by Russell Cook and Miss Patterson of Somerville, Mass. A rising vote of thanks was given Mr. Cook, Miss Patterson, Mr. Gurney and all who helped in the splendid program. On motion of Comrade Trask Mrs. Higgins was made an honorary member of this association; remarks by Comrade Harding; recitation, Ashley Paul.

A rising vote of thanks was given Silver Harvest Grange and the good citizens of Waldo for their splendid entertainment and dinner.

Closed by singing "The Star Spangled Banner."

A small fireproof office building will be erected just north of The Bicknell, with coal scales in front. Mr. Bicknell's activities will not end there, however, for he is also to build north of the coal office an apartment house which will be a duplicate of The Bicknell, and in his lumber yard five buildings which will have slated roofs and torcin metal walls, so that there will be a minimum amount of danger of a repetition of the conflagration which recently destroyed his big plant. One of the lumber yard buildings is now partly in frame.—Courier-Gazette.

The Battered Brothers of the Rich lounged in non-executive session on a side-tracked gondola-car at Lethargy Landing. Four in number, they had been thrown together by the cosmic swirl which governs the movements of the derelict. Volition to them was a negative factor.

"Say, fellows," remarked Photograph Pete, "I'll bet that the man who invented work was a professional labor agitator."

"What you want to talk about work for?" growled Sleepy Sam. "You make me tired."

"I rise to a point of order," interrupted Loquacious Louie. "If Pete is prompted to put in a record merely for the sake of standing before his own megaphone and hearing himself vociferate, I protest, but if he can slip in something that possesses the quality of novel entertainment, I'm no protestant."

"What you got on your mind, Pete?" asked Pugilistic Patrick.

"A couple of years ago," began Pete, "I was doing some topographic research work up in Pennsylvania. Investigating the lay of the land with an eye to the future. Locating havens of rest where a fellow might secure three meals and liberty without the consequent ennui of ringing up on the time-clock."

"One day, after shaking the dust of a bum burg from my clothes and the constable from my trail, I hit the railroad track a few miles out and awaited the arrival of my private car. There must have been a holiday on the line, for nothing came along, and I was finally forced to locomote by my own powers of locomotion."

"A little farther on, the village loomed into view. It was a fair-looking town, judging from my point of vantage, and I hoped to add it to my list of eligible localities."

"The sight of that likely looking burg put ginger into my hitting footsteps, and I soon arrived at the outskirts. There was a string of cars drawn up on a siding along the fence which surrounded some buildings."

"I was wondering what kind of plant it might be, when on passing a place where the string of cars was broken about fifteen feet, I saw painted on the fence in huge white letters against a black background:

DANGEROUS: POWDER WORKS.

"I quickly put out my pipe, which I was smoking, and stuck it in my pocket. I had no desire to start on an expedition in search of the milkmaids up in the milky way."

"Work, in the abstract, has never appealed to me, and how a man in the full possession of his faculties can associate with a job in a powder factory beats me."

"Just think, fellows, of working along for five days with your eye on the clock, calculating how many more hours it is before pay-day comes around, and then, when the timepiece has only one more lap to go, somebody does a fool thing and the whole outfit blows up, sending you to kingdom come with a full week's pay uncollected."

"Well, I knew from hearsay that a powder works is a sort of slumbering Vesuvius, so I proceeded to disassociate myself from the proximity. I hot-footed it past that open space in the string of cars. As I was passing the last car in the bunch, I happened to look at it, and I nearly jumped out of my socks when I saw a thin wreath of smoke coming out from it."

"I did a hundred-yard dash down the track in record time, then stopped. I looked around to see if I could locate any one who was trying to qualify for the 'Nobel courage prize,' but the place was shy on candidates."

"I ran back to the car and tried to open the door, but found it locked. I thought that if I could find out what the car contained I could proceed more intelligently with the first-aid stunt, but it was a clean lookout, so I was forced to proceed along other lines."

"The smoke was pouring out in thick volumes by this time, and I realized that I had to get it moving pretty soon or hustle myself out of the danger zone. I worked the bar until I had a crop of blisters on both hands, but the fiery freight was immovable as a tenement house rent collector."

"Suddenly I made the startling discovery that the brakes were set. I ran around to the front end of the car, and climbing up I quickly loosened the brake. Then climbing down, I rushed back and had that car going in no time."

"After moving it along a few feet, the car started to run of its own accord, and I realized that there was a slight grade at that point, sufficient to allow it to travel by gravity."

"I ran ahead and swung around. As I climbed to the top the flames began to eat their way through the roof, at the rear end. I grasped the brake-wheel and spun it around so as to get control of the car should the grade get too stiff."

"Slowly, my fiery chariot gathered speed, and by the time we struck the village we were exceeding the speed limit. As we struck the crossing the watchman rushed out of his shanty and made some unintelligible remark to me, but I kept on going."

"I looked ahead and saw that the track was clear for a good stretch, but I also saw that it was down grade."

GOVERNMENT OWNERSHIP.

Those who clamor for government ownership overlook some very important facts; in particular, it is that with all privately owned business there is the constant desire to develop some new feature, or machine, or method by which business may be improved, increased or simplified, and greater profit insured. With the government it is entirely different. The struggle there is to hold office, to increase the political pull. Progress, which is written big over all private enterprises, ceases when one approaches government owned lines. Here is something to consider when talk is made about taking over the railroads or any other line of business. It would seem as though so that there was no possibility of stopping. On we rushed, the wind fanning the flames, but fortunately for me, sweeping them rearward.

"Suddenly I heard a shrill whistle ahead, and I realized that an engine was on the same track as my car. It had stopped about a mile off."

"Here's where we make a sensational finish," I said to myself. Then I saw the engine get into motion and start down the track. That fellow at the throttle certainly let her out some, by my pyrotechnical Pullman kept gaining on me steadily. I grew interested in the race, and wished that I was close enough to bet the engineer on the outcome."

"Talk about the mountain of fame being down hill on the other side! That grade had the mountain of fame looking level. Slowly we gained on that engine ahead, which was speeding like an automobile endeavoring to outdistance a pursuing fire collector."

"Ahead, in the distance, another town came into view, and I wondered whether there would be a reception committee to greet us."

"That engineer seemed to get an extra burst of speed out of his puffing engine as we neared the town, and just as he struck the outskirts he slackened up, and his fireman jumped. He ran back a short distance, and I saw him desperately trying to throw a switch. He got it over just in time, and my special left the main track."

"I thought we had been going some before, but this new line that they had switched me onto was in a class by itself. The fellows that laid that track must have worked on ladders. You've seen those gravity roads where they pull trains up with a steel cable, and let them run down by holding them back?"

"Well, that's the kind of proposition I was up against. At the end of the track, about a mile down, I caught a glimpse of a river, which seemed to be rushing up to meet me, and before I had time to get the mental impression registered, that carload of fire hit something, and I made a long-distance dive into the watery depths."

"I hit the water and went down about a mile. When I came up, and got the water out of my eyes, I struck out for the shore."

"Say, Pete," interrupted Loquacious Louie, "when and where did you learn to swim?"

"Oh," replied Pete, "I learned to swim before I cut my wisdom teeth. I was born on a canal boat. Well, as I was saying, I struck out for the shore like a bullfrog going a wooing. The car had struck a bumper on the river edge, and the wreck was burning fiercely. By the time I had pulled myself ashore a crowd had collected to enjoy the fire."

"Say, sport," said a fellow who looked like a railroad man, "where'd you come from?"

"Up by the powder works about five miles back," I answered.

"Powder works," said the fellow. "What powder works? There ain't no powder works within 20 miles of this place."

"I guess I can read," I said. "Especially when the letters happen to be about five feet high. If that place isn't a powder works, they ought to take in their sign."

"The village constable pushed through the crowd and asked the cause of the trouble. The railroad-looking fellow told him, and advised that he lock me up until they found out how I came to be joy-riding around the country."

"The constable took me over to the town burgess. When I told my story he seemed to be favorably impressed. 'There is one weak point in your story,' he said. 'You claim that this car was standing alongside the powder works, but there are no powder works within 20 miles of this place.'

"But I can take you to them," I insisted.

"All right," he replied. "How far is it?"

"About a mile straight up, and five miles back along the line," I replied.

"Jake," he said, turning to the constable, "hit up my team, and we'll drive up. I haven't anything particular on hand."

"Well, we drove up, and finally reached the point where I had started my trip on the combustible limited. The pile ran along the railroad tracks at the point, and as we came opposite the open space in the string of cars, I told Jake to pull up his prancing plugs."

"There! I said triumphantly, pointing to the sign. 'What does that mean?'"

"The judge and Jake gave a look, and then burst into hilarious laughter."

"Gosh, all hemlock!" laughed the judge, when he could control himself. "This sure is a joke on you. Come on, Jake. Let's take him over and show him, and then ship him back to Mississippi."

"We all got out of the wagon and crossed the railroad tracks. They took me through the open space in the string of cars, and then the cause of their hilarity broke upon my astonished gaze."

"Painted along the whole length of the fence, in letters like the ones I'd read between the cars, was this:

PEACHBLOW FACE POWDER WORKS WONDERS.

"When I recovered my faculties, I put distance between myself and that beauty bulletin. As I faded from the landscape, I heard an explosion in the rear, but it was only Jake and the judge laughing."

"Quite a difference between face powder and the kind you was thinking of, Hey, Pete?" remarked Loquacious Louie.

"Oh, I don't know," replied Pete. "They are both used to wage warfare on more men."

We have had all the object lesson we needed in the manner in which our railroads were run by the government during the war or how our ships were built. The prayer of every thinking man will be to be delivered from further government ownership of industries.—Maine Farmer.

Why We Say "She"

The discussion being on why we refer to an automobile as "she," one man said it was because when a car is slicked up and attractive we all admire her; when she acts properly she is charming; yet we often drive her into improper action by lack of care, and when she gets old and has lost her style we try to discard her and get a more pleasing one.—Boston Transcript.

What Will Indians Do With $500,000.00?

DULUTH.—Chippewa Indians on the Net Lake Indian reservation in northwestern Minnesota, who recently received approximately $500,000 for timber sold from their reservation, will make good use of the money.

Instead of disposing of their fortune for blankets, beads, tobacco and possibly whisky, as the Indian of old did, the Chippewas will build schools and homes, outfit their farms with modern machinery and stock, and undoubtedly made rapid advancement from conditions which have gained for them the name of the most primitive of the Chippewa nation.

So believes Chief Wa-na-bo-sho, Carlisle graduate, and better known as Joe Northrup, who is devoting his time to helping the Indians become better civilized and to encourage legislation which would release to the Chippewas millions of dollars said to be rightly theirs, which is being held in reserve by the government Indian bureau.

Living in what Chief Wa-na-bo-sho describes as "wretched conditions," the Net Lake tribe of the Chippewas gained fame in recent years by their primitive habits. Many of the older chiefs and squaws of the Chippewa nation retired to the Net Lake reservation several years ago and practically became outcasts from their nation. They refused to recognize the tribe's general council and in the past, according to Wa-na-bo-sho, they have repeatedly turned down offers of assistance from their fellow tribesmen.

This situation was brought about, Wa-na-bo-sho believes, because the Indians were destitute. He believes the Net Lake Chippewas will now join their fellow tribesmen in the upward trend to the modern mode of living.

Early in June contracts with the Chippewas and the Northwestern Paper company, Cloquet, Minn., were signed, whereby the lumbermen will pay the Indians approximately $500,000 for from 20,000,000 to 30,000,000 feet of saw timberland pulp wood in the vicinity of Net Lake.

"Texas Bill" and His Way of Courting

BOSTON.—Something new in the line of courting has been introduced by William ("Texas Bill") Cunningham, famous Dartmouth football star, who proposed over long distance telephone to a girl he had seen only once in his life, and then for less than one minute. The story dates back to last November.

"Texas Bill" was playing center for Dartmouth in the Dartmouth Cornell football game at the Polo grounds, Miss Doris Wilde of Attleboro, Mass., was in the grandstand accompanied by a Cornell student. She noticed the bang-up game her future husband played.

After the game, in the lobby of the Pennsylvania Hotel, a mutual friend introduced them. Their interview lasted just 45 seconds. That was all Miss Wilde and "Texas Bill" saw of each other until their wedding day.

After graduating and joining the staff of the Dallas News, Mr. Cunningham began a correspondence which at first reached the mark of only a fortnightly letter. The correspondence was gradually increased until some days five letters were received by each. Many telegrams and special deliveries came in between letters.

So it was that one night Mr. Cunningham grew lonesome. He called up on the long distance telephone. The call awoke her at 3:30 a. m. Mr. Cunningham talked to Miss Wilde for more than a half hour. At the end of that time he had achieved two things—a tremendous phone bill and Miss Wilde's consent to marry him.

Mr. Cunningham shortly afterward was assigned by his paper to cover the Dempsey-Carpentier fight in Jersey City. He telegraphed to Miss Wilde and the wedding invitations were printed.

Luckily the lovers were able to recognize each other at the Boston depot.

Hot Summer Nights Start Something New

CHICAGO.—This town has been invaded by pirates. Three exponents of the persuasion of "Long John" Silver came out of the darkness at the Jackson Park lake front, held up the occupants of a half dozen dimly lighted automobiles parked on the boulevard edge and disappeared toward the lake as silently and mysteriously as they came.

Many automobile parties have invaded this section of the beach, near the German building, of late. With cars parked at intervals of 100 feet, they have spent many hot night hours, "cooling off," they say. At 2 a. m. three modern pirates, their faces covered by handkerchiefs, their right hands gripping revolvers, came "up from the sea" and approached one of the automobiles parked at the curb.

"Stick them up," commanded the pirates.

From one machine to another went the pirate crew. None of the autosts offered resistance. They appeared relieved that the visitors were pirates rather than inquisitive police.

The pirates were tall, slender, blond and young. Two of them removed the handkerchiefs from their faces to get a better glimpse at the girls.

Perhaps the police never would have heard of the affair had the pirates not held up the car of Jack Wolf, head of an automobile storage battery concern at 837 E. Forty-seventh st. Wolf lost $20 and his desire to cool off. He reported the affair to the police.

Wolf, according to the police, were Mrs. Hazel Van Peener, 3356 Maryland avenue and Miss Lottie Harvey, who runs a candy shop said she was robbed of $50.

Members of the Wolf party said they saw the pirates visit at least six other cars, so they knew that others had been robbed. Yet none of these reported to the police. The other man in the Wolf party did not appear at the police station.

Wouldn't my conscience harass me to eternity because I had been cured by a faith healer and had gone on the stage?"

In speaking of Mary Kinney's case, Mrs. McPherson said:

"After the Lord healed, He said: 'Go thou in peace and sin no more.' 'Most a worse thing come upon thee,' Mary, as I understand it, has not sinned, but she wants to be cured in order that she might tread a path that is beset with temptation. It may be that she was born lame because the Lord desired to hold her back. Surely, I could not consistently pray for her cure if she wants to be made whole in order to go on the stage and dance."

President McKinley said: "A Protective Tariff levels up. Free-Trade levels down. Free-Trade cheapens labor. A Protective Tariff not only protects the products of the farm, the factory, and the mine, but it protects the wages of labor as well. We can never have Free Trade in this country until the other nations of the earth bring their conditions of living, education and labor upon equal terms with ours. We refuse to accept the scale of wages and mode of living now prevailing among the nations of Europe and the oriental world. We refuse to be pulled down upon the low level they unfortunately occupy."

The Lame Girl and the Faith Healer

DENVER.—Mary Kinney, beautiful, lame, wants to be healed, but the "miracle woman," Mrs. Almee Semple McPherson, cannot pray for her because Mary is ambitious to dance.

Born lame, Mary, who is a cashier in a downtown drug store, was left an orphan three years ago and now lives alone in a Denver hotel. Her two sisters are busy in other cities, winning fortunes on the stage. Mary would give worlds to join them; she is fond of music, and just crazy to dance.

Since the first Denver case of a cripple who claimed to have been cured by the prayers of Mrs. McPherson became known, Mary has been one of the vast crowd that filled the municipal auditorium.

"It's awful to think," she said. "You see, it's this way: Mrs. McPherson says that the persons who come to her to be cured by faith must tear up the jazz music, must give themselves up to a life with Christ, must study the Bible, must do anything but go on the stage. But you see why I want to be cured. I want to go on the stage. But what if I were to be cured by the prayers of Mrs. McPherson?"

Wouldn't my conscience harass me to eternity because I had been cured by a faith healer and had gone on the stage?"

Some people in Massachusetts have evidently allowed sentiment to get the better of judgment and have planted the bright red poppies that grew on Flanders Fields. Now our commissioner of agriculture has issued a warning against them and urges that no more plants or seeds be brought into the State as their planting may result in tremendous agricultural loss. The Flanders poppy spreads very rapidly, the seeds being carried considerable distance by the winds. Many times in the past imported plants have proved pests, so sentiment just now should be thrown away.

AMERICAN FOOD SHIP SAVES 18,000 BABES FROM STARVATION

Heroic Yankee Women Risk Lives to Rescue Children, in Service of Near East Relief

Constantinople.—How the prompt action of Charles V. Vickrey, General Secretary of the Near East Relief, and Harold C. Jaquith, representative of that American relief organization in Constantinople, saved the lives of 18,000 orphan children and seven American relief workers in Alexandropol, Armenia, is what all the representatives of the Allied nations in Constantinople are applauding today.

For five years the Near East Relief organization had built up a work of mercy throughout the former Turkish Empire and Transcaucasia, to a point where 54,600 little children were being housed, clothed, fed, given medical attendance and taught, and over 56,000 others being supplied with food. Then suddenly, on February 5, last, there came hurried cable reports of renewed fighting in Armenia and Transcaucasia, where 75,818 of these little ones were located under the protection of the Near East Relief.

HELP!

ONE OF THE 18,000

Just Relief. Consular representatives left the country. All foreigners piled onto ships and fled. War threatened to scatter the work and render vain the long, patient efforts of the Near East Relief to salvage a whole nation's children.

But the American men and women who had cared for these little ones were undismayed. They refused to leave under bombardment, with hostile armies sweeping through the streets where the Near East Relief's great orphanages had been established, with all supplies cut off and no communication with the outside world, or with that far American homeland whose representatives these heroic men and women are, they stuck to their posts. The last food from America had come in on November 6, 1920.

It was not until four months later that the new governments of the Transcaucasian states were established on a solid basis. But famine threatened. An appeal was made to America. Philadelphia's "Critical Care" for food products in Caucasus, the cable said. "No food is needed in Armenia. A government promises to provide facilities for relief activity from former governments." A few days later, a further plea followed. "Total orphans in Alexandropol 18,000. Supplies in Alexandropol allow half-rations, April 3rd to 30th. After May 1st, nothing."

But this splendid American relief organization had not waited. Food was already on the way. On April 22, Charles V. Vickrey, general secretary of the Near East Relief, cabled: "Expect ship first week in May; 1,000 tons rice; 1,000 tons wheat flour; 600 tons cornmeal, corn flour, hominy, 30 tons sugar; 500 tons beans; 5,000 cases corn syrup. From New York and New Orleans direct to Beirut, Aden, and 1,000 tons wheat flour from Pacific Coast June 1st."

The seven American relief workers in charge of the 18,000 little ones in Alexandropol cabled a last appeal: "No food at any price. Four days more and we are finished." But when the first relief ship, "Queen" entered the deserted harbor of Batum on May 1, there were just ten days of flour left. The food ship had come in time. America had saved the day—and the 18,000 little orphans, who had suffered so much and lost so much in their short, war-torn lives, never knew that hunger in the robes of death had knocked at the door of the orphanage at Alexandropol—and that America had thrust the bony hand of life.

"It is the great heart of America that made this work of salvation possible," Mr. Vickrey declared. "The money that sends the bread to these children comes from ten million homes throughout the United States. It comes from the hearts of the most generous people in the world, who cannot bear to know that half a world away, little children are facing hunger and death, without helping them to life and happiness."

Mr. Vickrey is making a nationwide appeal to the people of the United States to keep this great work going. Contributions may be sent to Cleveland H. Dodge, Treasurer, 1 Madison Avenue, New York City.

THE OLD WAY AND THE NEW.

Because my calf became his cow;
I left my dad—'twas wrong, of course,
But my pet colt became his horse;
I left my dad to sow and reap
Because my lamb became his sheep;
I dropped my hoe, and hit New York
Because my pig became his pork;
The garden truck I made to grow,
Was his to sell, and mine to hoe.
Believe me, too, I had to hoe—
There was no riding down the row.

With dad and me it's half and half
The cow I own was once his calf.
I'm going to stick right where I am,
Because my sheep was once his lamb.
I'll stay with dad—he gets my vote,
Because his hog was once my shote.
No town for me—I'll stick right here
For he's made me tractor engineer.
It's "even split" with dad and me
In a profit sharing company.
We work together from day to day—
Believe me, boys, it's the only way.

MR. JAMES RANDEL.

Mr. James Randel, a former Belfast citizen, died Aug. 31st at his home in Santa Ana, Calif. With his family he made the trip to California about a year ago by auto from this city, where he had lived about ten years. He liked California, but planned to eventually return to Belfast, where he had many friends. He was born in Springfield, Vt., 62 years ago, the son of Smith K. and Eveline (Henry) Randel. The greater part of his life was spent in Worcester, Mass. He had been in ill health for some time and his death was sudden. His wife, formerly Miss Emelda Patterson of Belfast, one daughter, Mrs. Maurice D. Towle of this city, three sons, James A. of Portland, Oregon; Roy S. and George H. of Santa Ana, one brother, George H. Randel of Fitchburg, Mass., and two sisters, Mrs. Oscar Weston of Fitchburg and Mrs. Abigail Wetherbee of White River Junction, Vt., also two grandchildren, Evelyn and Richard Towle of this city survive him. It is probable that the interment will be made in California for the present and later his remains will be brought to the Randel family lot in Springfield, Vt.

MRS. SARAH E. JOHNSON.

Mrs. Sarah Elizabeth Johnson died at the Waldo County Hospital Aug. 30th after a brief illness with pneumonia following a long period of failing in mental and physical strength. She was born in Northboro Sept. 1835, the daughter of Nathaniel and Roxanna (Moody) Simmons. The family moved to Belfast in 1847 and she was married to Frederick Johnson of Belfast Aug. 30, 1858. They lived in Idaho several years, where Mr. Johnson was engaged in the mill business. Later they bought a farm at Poor's Mills and he conducted a flour and grist mill as long as his health permitted. They then moved to the Newell Mansfield house on Franklin street, where he died. This left Mrs. Johnson without relatives nearer than nieces and nephews and she became a life member at the Belfast Home for Aged Women. She had a very modest and refined nature and enjoyed the respect of all who knew her. During her active years she was a consistent member of the Baptist church. The funeral took place Thursday afternoon at the home with her pastor, Rev. George C. Sauer, officiating. The interment was in Morrill.

TO THE PEOPLE OF MAINE:

It is with supreme delight I announce to the people of Maine that MR. GLEDHILL of New York, one of the most successful and widely known woolen and worsted manufacturers of America, has assumed the Presidency of and the affairs of this company will have the great advantage of his personal attention in the future. This will be welcome news to the many stockholders of THE LINCOLN WORSTED COMPANY, and as the success of any business depends upon its management, the fact that Eli Gledhill has assumed active control of this Company will indicate greater security and prosperity to our stockholders.

While recently in New York I met many of Mr. Gledhill's large customers and through him learned that several are ready to contract for the first year's output of our factory at prices that ought to mean a most handsome margin of profit.

The product of Mr. Gledhill's other mills is already sold to the limit for next spring's delivery, and New York dealers are anxious to have our mill in operation at the earliest date possible to provide worsteds for the heavy weight season.

With our goods going into the salesrooms of Mr. Gledhill, with his reputation for goods of quality and of popular designs, widely demonstrated by the products of the Mystic Manufacturing Company's mills at Mystic, Connecticut; the Lockwood Mills, Ashway, Rhode Island; the Old Colony Mills at Sangerville, Maine, and Rochester, N. H., we shall at once have the prestige of his skillful designing and manufacturing ability. Therefore, with such men at the head of THE LINCOLN WORSTED COMPANY, the people of Maine can well feel proud of its first STATE WIDE FACTORY.

Many of our brightest men in Maine are publicly proclaiming the wisdom of our slogan: "KEEP MAINE'S MONEY AND MAINE'S SONS IN MAINE," but, to these estimable gentlemen let me good naturedly suggest that ORATORY WILL NOT BUILD MAINE FACTORIES. Let us not preach the necessity of these wise moves for Maine's welfare while we withhold our own money and wait for "George to do it." To my eloquent friends who are booming Maine with their rhetoric only let me say that many of you are able to come over with some cash and I ask you to boom Maine in a substantial way viz:—buy stock now in the Lincoln Worsted Company, and help build Maine's splendid and newest worsted factory. Subscribe now that this mill may get to running early and afford employment to men and women who are now idle and looking ahead to a winter of unemployment and distress.

You may not realize it, but every month that you can save in getting this plant into operation by subscribing now, instead of waiting, means that many hundreds of dollars every month may be saved in profits for the stockholders.

Worsted prices are high and we must start manufacturing while these extra good prices prevail.

Again, I say most frankly to the people of Maine, if under these conditions, the moneyed people as well as the big officeholders and business men of this State will not take hold and boom this enterprise I think they had better stop talking and do nothing. When I think for three years, since the first State Chamber of Commerce meeting was held in Augusta, and talked about new industries so forcibly, that Lincoln is the only town to respond and that these very people who talked most have not invested a cent in the first project to boom Maine, it disappoints and almost disgusts me.

I love my native State and want to do everything possible for her. However, if the people WHO HAVE LIVED HERE ALL THEIR LIVES AND HAVE BEEN SUCCESSFUL don't care to do their share in booming Maine why should a few continue?

We will give a demonstration in Lincoln of what can be done the same as we did in Sangerville, will have one of the finest worsted mills in the country, and one of the most economical to operate.

Now, Mr. Booster for Maine, and Citizens, think this over seriously and realize what an opportunity the people of this State have to increase the population by industrial development, utilizing our water powers and put Maine where it should be. But, a certain few cannot do it alone, it requires the united effort of all.

I know from experience it can be done in Maine as it is done in other States. It is true, freight rates are high, but, that is nothing compared with the other savings, in the way of power, etc. What we need to put Maine where she belongs industrially, is co-operation and financial support.

Are you ready to do your part, or do you want to let things stand as they have for the past one hundred years? I don't believe the people of this State want to see Maine slumber for another century.

Now, let's work together and boom Maine industrially or STOP TALKING about it, for if we don't go ahead now we will be a joke all over New England.

It is of no avail for the capitalist and large business men to say they cannot invest now because at this particular time many of the wealthy people are investing in enterprises in other States, instead of helping to boom their own, and I believe that they cannot criticize the stability of this enterprise considering the men who are behind it.

If you care to be on the honor roll of helping Maine send in the coupon today, as the quicker The Lincoln Worsted Company project is completed so much the quicker will another one be started in Maine and it may be in your own town.

L. J. COBURN, Vice President Lincoln Worsted Co., Lincoln, Me.

THE LINCOLN WORSTED CO., Lincoln, Maine.
